Situation:

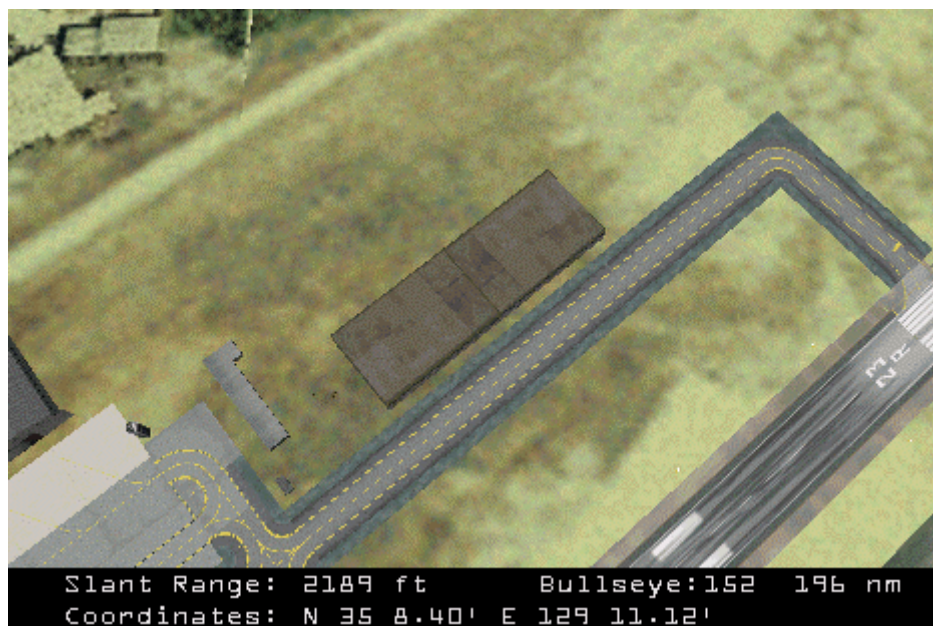

Korea, August 2009.

Following the successful invasion by DPRK Forces some 18 months ago, the entire peninsula is now under the control of the North. Obviously buoyed by this success, the DPRK (supported by both Russia and China) had been making bold acts of aggression against Japan. In response, Japan called on its US Allies for assistance in stopping these attacks. In return, Japan agreed to offer its airbases for use for the assault to recapture the Republic from its Northern invaders. That counter starts here and now.

Task:

The DPRK has now at its disposal an impressive array of SAM defence systems – indeed some of the best Russia has to offer. Before any ground-based assaults can be made, the Air Defence network has to be degraded and a number of targets have been identified. Your task is to attack the airbase at Sachon. It has been previously discovered several hangars are being used for storing missiles for the SA-10 systems employed along the south coast. Destroying the hangars will not only eliminate a long-term SAM threat, but probably wipe out the base also!

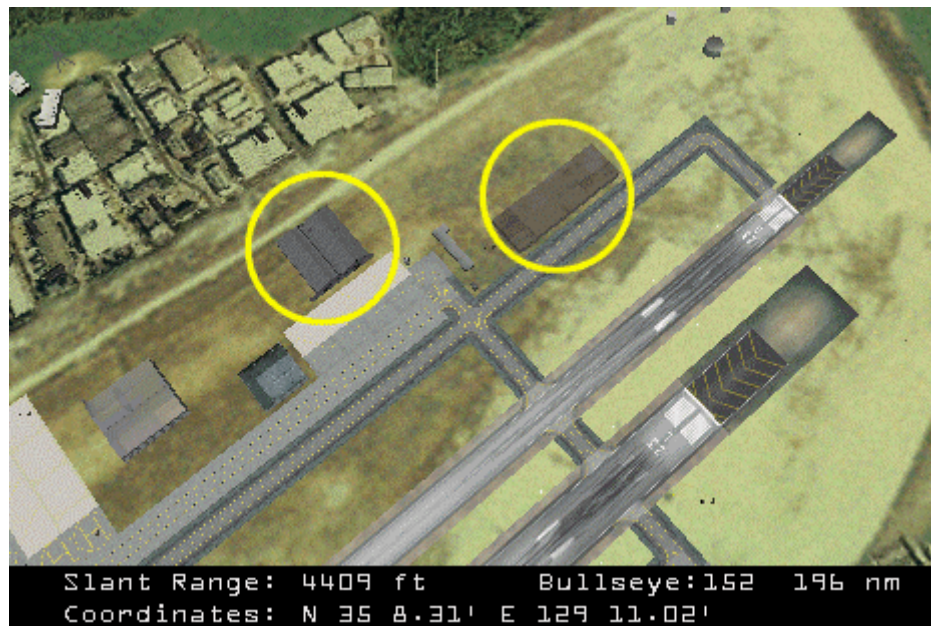

Hangar One:

Hangar Two:

Overview:

Command are also requesting we try to cause some damage to the nearby Nuclear Plant at Chinju, but this is very much an alternative target should the airbase hangars prove too difficult to attack safely:

Good hunting Gentlemen!
