BACKGROUND

It happened in November 2008 that the two Nuclear Plants in Hamhung and Togwon-ni exploded with devastating collateral damage and contaminated the area. The few people who survived the catastrophe formed a trek and started to move south, towards the border between North and South Korea. They hoped for medical care in modern hospitals. The President of North Korea, Po'Li Tuk, held imperialistic terrorists responsible for the assault, but changed his mind when a Chinese SpecOps team was arrested a week later. The true circumstances unveiled and after days of hectic diplomatic actions the frontier to South Korea was opened for refugees.

Some nationalist groups in North and South Korea that want to keep the status quo, have voted against any deplomatic negotioations and brought several military key locations in south west Korea under their control.

CURRENT SITUATION

The Nationalists want to support the key locations in the South and are sending cargo ships from Pupo-ri Naval Base to Mokpo Port. It is the only port under their control and they know about the strategic value. We have lost the airbases in Seosan and Kunsan and with them the Patriot sites defending the airbases.
